

Contributors

Jordan J. Ballor (Dr. theol., University of Zurich; PhD, Calvin Theological Seminary) is a senior research fellow and director of publishing at the Acton Institute. He is also a postdoctoral researcher in theology and economics at the Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam working on the Moral Markets project.

Timothy J. Barnett (PhD, University of Kansas) is professor of political science and the department head of Political Science and Public Administration at Jacksonville State University. Originally from the Pacific Northwest, he holds degrees in marketing and theology and an MPA from Boise State University. A former president of the Alabama Political Science Association, Barnett writes on legislative politics, constitutional federalism, freedom of religion, the fundamentals of market morality, and monetary policy.

Ryan Beach is a graduate of Cedarville University and a financial advisor at Edward Jones.

Andrew Beauchamp (PhD, Duke University) is associate professor of economics at Wright State University. He teaches and researches both applied microeconomics and Catholic social thought. His economic research examines family formation, including marriage, childbearing, contraception, and abortion. This work has been published in International Economic Review, Journal of Human Capital, Quantitative Economics, and many other journals. His work on Catholic social thought has been published in the Journal of Religious Ethics and the Journal of Moral Theology.

Art Carden (PhD, Washington University) is professor of economics at Samford University's Brock School of Business and co-editor of the Southern Economic Journal. His research on mass-market retailers, economic history, and the history of economic ideas has appeared in the Southern Economic Journal, Journal of Urban Economics, Public Choice, Contemporary Economic Policy, and other journals. He is a contributor to Forbes.com and his commentaries and other articles have appeared in USA Today, Productive!, Black Belt, and many other outlets. His book (with Deirdre McCloskey), Leave Me Alone and I'll Make You Rich: How the Bourgeois Deal Enriched the World, will be published by the University of Chicago Press in 2020.

Gregory W. Caskey is a second-year PhD Fellow in economics in the F. A. Hayek Program for Advanced Study in Philosophy, Politics, and Economics at George Mason University. His research interests are political economy, public choice, and development. Specific topics of interest include Chinese investment and lending activity in the developing world via the Belt and Road Initiative, formal and informal political institutions, and the economics of philanthropy, nonprofits, and religious movements.

Josep M. Castellà Andreu is professor of constitutional law at the University of Barcelona and vice president of the Club Tocqueville.

Alejandro Chafuen (PhD, International College) is managing director, international, at the Acton Institute. He is an expert on the economic thought of Thomistic and late-scholastic thinkers and a member of the Mont Pelerin Society.

Victor V. Claar (PhD, University of Virginia) is associate professor of economics at Florida Gulf Coast University, where he holds the BB&T Distinguished Professorship in Free Enterprise. He studied business and math as an undergraduate at Houghton College and earned his masters and doctoral degrees in economics at West Virginia University. He is an affiliate scholar of the Acton Institute and a member of the Foundation for Economic Education's Faculty Network. He is a Fulbright Scholar and spent a year teaching economics to graduate students in the former Soviet republic of Armenia. His long record of publications includes Economics in Christian Perspective: Theory, Policy and Life Choices.

Giuseppe Franco (PhD, University of Salento-Lecce; STD, Pontifical Lateran University) is a lecturer in theology and philosophy at the Catholic University of Eichstätt-Ingolstadt in Germany, where he was previously a postdoctoral "Feodor Lynen" research fellow of the Alexander von Humboldt Foundation.

His research papers were awarded the Max Weber Award for Economics and Ethics by the Cologne Institute for Economic Research in Germany, and the 2019 Novak Award by the Acton Institute. His current research focuses on tracing the trajectories of economic traditions in Europe and on the legacy of Franciscan economic thought and its relevance for contemporary challenges of globalization.

León M. Gómez Rivas (PhD, Universidad Complutense de Madrid) has been University Professor of Ethics and History of Economic Thought at the Universidad Europea de Madrid since 1991. He holds PhDs in history (1990) and economics (2004), and a BA and MA in theology from Universidad Eclesiástica San Dámaso (Madrid). He is a member of the Mont Pelérin Society, the Centro Diego de Covarrubias, the Instituto Juan de Mariana, and several academic associations in history and economics. He has been a visiting professor in Limerick (Ireland), Panama, Lisbon (Portugal), Porto Alegre (Brazil), and Istanbul (Turkey).

Jeff Haymond (PhD, George Mason University) is professor of economics at Cedarville University in Ohio. His research interests include monetary and public choice economics, with a special focus on the integration of faith and economics.

Ignacio Ibañez Ferrándiz (MA, Universidad CEU San Pablo) is a political affairs officer at the United Nations in New York.

Jason Jewell (PhD, Florida State University) is professor of humanities at Faulkner University, where he directs the Center for Great Books and Human Flourishing. He received an MA in history from Pepperdine University and a BA in history and music from Harding University. He is associate editor of the Journal of Faith and the Academy and a contributor to Christian Faith and Social Justice: Five Views (Bloomsbury, 2014) and The Inklings and King Arthur (2018).

Christopher Lingle (PhD, University of Georgia) is visiting professor of economics at the Universidad Francisco Marroquín in Guatemala. His research interests are political economy and international economics with a focus on emerging market economies and public policy reform in East and Central Europe, East Asia, Latin America, and Southern Africa, and he is the author of Singapore's Authoritarian Capitalism: Asian Values, Free Market Illusions, and Political Dependency (1996); and The Rise and Decline of the 'Asian Century': False Starts on the Road to the 'Global Millennium' (1997).

Dylan Pahman (MTS, Calvin Theological Seminary) is a research fellow at the Acton Institute, where he serves as managing editor of the Journal of Markets & Morality. He is the author of Foundations of a Free & Virtuous Society (Acton Institute, 2017). He has also lectured on a wide variety of topics, including Orthodox Christian social thought, the history of Christian monastic enterprise, the Reformed statesman and theologian Abraham Kuyper, and academic publishing.

Jay Richards (PhD, Princeton Theological Seminary) is research assistant professor in the Busch School of Business at The Catholic University of America, a Senior Fellow at the Discovery Institute, and executive editor of The Stream. He is the author of many books, including the New York Times bestsellers Infiltrated (2013) and Indivisible (2012). He is also the author of Money, Greed, and God, winner of a 2010 Templeton Enterprise Award; and co-author of The Privileged Planet with astronomer Guillermo Gonzalez.