
Contributors

Surendra Arjoon currently serves as chair of the department of management studies in the University of the West Indies, Trinidad. He previously served as associate dean of the faculty of social sciences. His work has appeared in the Journal of Business Ethics, Global Development Studies, Social and Economic Studies, and Applied Financial Economics. His current research and teaching interests relate to issues in business ethics and applications of virtue ethics.

José Atilano Pena López holds a Ph.D. in economics and is senior lecturer at the University of A Coruña, Spain. He teaches economic policy among other courses.

Gregory Mellema is professor of philosophy at Calvin College, where he has taught from roughly 1975 to the present. Mellema received his doctorate from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst in 1974. He was an instructor at St. Olaf College from 1974 to 1975. He later earned a Masters Degree in Business Administration from the University of Michigan, a degree which qualified him to teach and write about business ethics. He is the author of four books: Individuals, Groups, and Shared Moral Responsibility; Beyond the Call of Duty; Collective Responsibility; and The Expectations of Morality. His articles have appeared in over twenty different journals, including American Philosophical Quarterly, Canadian Journal of Philosophy, Philosophical Studies, Australasian Journal of Philosophy, Philosophia, and Analysis. Most of his recent articles deal with issues in ethics, both theoretical and applied, but he has also published in the areas of philosophy of language, logic, and the philosophy of education.

Contributors

Christopher Todd Meredith is a doctoral student in philosophy at Tulane University.

José Manuel Sánchez Santos holds a Ph.D. in economics and is a professor at the University of A Coruña, Spain. He teaches economic policy among other courses.

Marcelo Sánchez Sorondo is president of the Pontifical Academy of Sciences and of the Pontifical Academy of Social Sciences. He is also professor of the history of philosophy at Libera Università Maria SS. Assunta in Rome. Pope John Paul II ordained him Bishop in March 2001.

Krassen Stanchev is board chairman of the Institute for Market Economics (since 1993) and a former member of parliament. He has led IME, Bulgaria's first independent economic think tank, to be one of the most respected public policy institutes in the emerging Eastern European democracies. In addition to his public policy work, he is keenly interested in the relationship between religion and economics in Orthodoxy.

Marek Tracz-Tryniecki has recently completed his doctoral studies in legal and political thought at the University of Maria Curie-Skłodowska in Lublin, Poland. His doctoral dissertation examined the thought of Alexis de Tocqueville in light of Catholic social teaching.