

---

Contributors

Mark Ahlseen is associate professor of economics at Bethany College in Lindsborg, Kansas. He received his bachelor's in accounting and economics (double major) from Taylor University and his master's and doctorate in economics from Texas A&M University.

Peter Boettke is professor of economics at George Mason University and the deputy director of the James M. Buchanan Center for Political Economy and research fellow at the Mercatus Center. He is also editor of the Review of Austrian Economics. He received his bachelor's from Grove City College and his doctorate from George Mason University.

Ricardo F. Crespo is professor of philosophy of economics at the Universidad Nacional de Cuyo, and at IAE, Universidad Austral, Mendoza, Argentina. He is a board member of Universidad Austral and an author and contributor to several books in his field. His articles have appeared in the Review of Austrian Economics, Journal des Economistes et Etudes Humaines, Journal of Markets and Morality, among others.

Jeannine Emery has a degree in Spanish Literature, and a master's in nonfiction writing. She works as editor and translator in both English and Spanish and lives in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Peter T. Leeson is research fellow at the James M. Buchanan Center for Political Economy and the Mercatus Center at George Mason University. He recently completed a year as visiting fellow in the Political Economy and Government program at Harvard University. He received his bachelor's from Hillsdale College and is completing his doctorate in economics at George Mason University.

Contributors

Alberto Mingardi is a policy director of the Istituto Bruno Leoni (Turin), the Italian free-market think tank of which he is a co-founder. He is also a visiting fellow with the Brussels-based Centre for the New Europe, Europe's leading free-market think tank. His current research interests in political philosophy are Antonio Rosmini and Herbert Spencer.

Rodrigo Muñoz teaches in the theology faculty at the University of Navarra in Pamplona, Spain. He is a specialist on economic topics in sixteenth-century Spanish moral theology and has written numerous articles and reviews in this field, in addition to a recent book on the thought of Martín de Azpilcueta (Moral y economía en la obra de Martín de Azpilcueta, EUNSA, Pamplona, 1998).

Fr. Anthony G. Percy is a diocesan priest of the Archdiocese of Canberra-Goulburn, Australia. His undergraduate studies were in finance at the University of New South Wales. He received his doctorate in moral theology from the John Paul II Institute for Studies on Marriage and Family, at the Catholic University of America, Washington, D.C., in 2003.

Timothy P. Roth is currently the A. B. Templeton professor and chairman of the Department of Economics and Finance at the University of Texas at El Paso. He served as a consultant to President Reagan's Cabinet Council on Economic Policy, as executive director of Reagan's Steel Advisory Committee, and as senior economic advisor in the office of former Secretary of Commerce Malcolm Baldrige. His academic work has included the publication of numerous books, journal articles, and technical monographs for the U.S. Congress Joint Economic Committee.