

Contributors

Surendra Arjoon (PhD, University of Teesside) is professor of business and professional ethics. His work is based on significant scholarly contributions to the academic literature on an enhanced theory of virtues such as core competencies in ethical decision-making, a stakeholder theory of capitalism, and linking corporate governance with ethics. He also lectures at the Department of Management Studies and the Arthur Lok-Jack Graduate School of Business, the University of the West Indies, St. Augustine Campus, Trinidad.

Timothy J. Barnett (PhD, University of Kansas) is associate professor of political science at Jacksonville State University, Jacksonville, Alabama. He holds degrees in marketing and theology and an MPA from Boise State University. A former president of the Alabama Political Science Association, Barnett has written on legislative politics, constitutional federalism, monetary policy, and freedom of religion. His latest book is entitled America's False Recovery: The Coming Sovereign Debt Crisis and Rise of Democratic Plutocracy.

Clive Beed (PhD) and Cara Beed (MEd) are, respectively, retired senior lecturer in economics, at the University of Melbourne and retired lecturer in sociology at Australian Catholic University. They have published in a variety of academic journals on the relationship between theology and economics and in 1997 were awarded a Templeton Prize. A number of their papers were consolidated into a book in 2006, titled Alternatives to Economics: Christian Socio-Economic Perspectives, published by the University Press of America. Cara is also involved in the Boston-based Theology of Work project.

Contributors

Darrin W. Snyder Belousek (PhD, University of Notre Dame) is lecturer in philosophy and religion at Ohio Northern University and adjunct professor of religion at Bluffton University. His article “Market Exchange, Self-Interest, and the Common Good: Financial Crisis and Moral Economy” (Journal of Markets & Morality) was honored with the Templeton Enterprise Award in Human Economics for 2010.

Reyes Calderón (PhD, University of Navarra) is professor of corporate governance in the School of Economics and Business Administration at Universidad de Navarra in Pamplona, Spain. Her research interests focus on the study of best practices in corporate governance and on the analysis of the anticorruption and transparency strategies.

Ignacio Ferrero is professor of business ethics at the University of Navarra. He has been a visiting scholar at Bentley University, Harvard University, and Notre Dame University. He has published several books on the history of economic thought and articles on business ethics.

David W. Gill (PhD, University of Southern California) is the Mockler-Phillips Professor of Workplace Theology & Business Ethics and director of the Mockler Center for Faith & Ethics in the Workplace (www.mockler.org), Gordon-Conwell Theological Seminary, South Hamilton, Massachusetts.

Albert Gootjes (PhD, Calvin Theological Seminary) is a translator of numerous books and articles on the history of Reformation and post-Reformation theology, and research fellow at the Junius Institute for Digital Reformation Research at Calvin Theological Seminary.

Nicolaas H. Gootjes (ThD, Theological University of Kampen) is emeritus professor of dogmatology at the Canadian Reformed Theological Seminary and author of several articles and books, including The Belgic Confession: Its History and Sources (Grand Rapids: Baker Academic, 2007).

John Larrivee is associate professor of economics at Mount St. Mary's University in Emmitsburg, Maryland. His current research focuses on the view of the human person behind economic theory, values, and policies, particularly the influence of philosophical materialism.

Jonathan E. Leightner (PhD in economics, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill; MA in philosophy, Baylor University) is full professor of economics at Georgia Regents University and visiting professor of economics at Chulalongkorn University.

Michael Macaulay is associate professor of public management and deputy director of the Institute for Governance and Policy Studies in the School of Government, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand.

Giovanni Patriarca studied political science at the University of Camerino, Italy, and philosophy at the Pontifical Lateran University, Vatican City. He earned a Diploma in Islamic Studies at the Pontifical Institute for Arabic and Islamic Studies-P.I.S.A.I., a Master in School Management from the University of Macerata, Italy, and a PhD in philosophy at the Pontifical University Regina Apostolorum in Rome. He was a visiting scholar at Humboldt University in Berlin and undertook research and studies in a number of different academic institutions in France, Hungary, Slovakia, Poland, the Czech Republic, and Greece. He was the recipient of the Acton Institute's 2012 Novak Award.

Ayman Reda (PhD in economics, Michigan State University) is assistant professor in economics at the Lebanese American University in Beirut. He is currently serving as assistant dean at the School of Business.

Kyle Scott (PhD, University of Houston) teaches political science at the University of Houston and is an elected member of the Lone Star College System Board of Trustees. He is the author of four books and over a dozen articles on American politics, constitutional law, and political theory.

Alfred Kentigern Siewers is associate professor of English and affiliate faculty member in environmental studies at Bucknell University. He is author of Strange Beauty: Ecocritical Approaches to Early Medieval Landscape, editor of Re-Imagining Nature: Environmental Humanities and Ecossemiotics, coeditor of Tolkien's Modern Middle Ages, and coeditor of the Stories of the Susquehanna Valley book series and digital project. Former urban affairs writer and Midwestern correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, he is a fellow of the Sophia Institute at Union Theological Seminary and a steering committee member of the Orthodox Fellowship of the Transfiguration.

Contributors

John Addison Teevan (AB, Princeton; DMin, intercultural studies, Grace Seminary) is the executive director of Correctional and Urban (Regional) Initiatives at Grace College in Indiana. His book from which this article is adapted is forthcoming from the Acton Institute.

Charles Edward White (PhD, Boston University) is professor of Christian thought and history at Spring Arbor University.